

LIFELINE LIVE

Your ticket to all that's entertainment

E-mail me

Get Lifeline

Add Lifeline
to your page

Subscribe
with RSS

Get Lifeline
in your inbox

Recent Posts

- Gillian Anderson shows off her figure
- Doherty to pay for camera-bashing incident
- Philadelphia ad agency pays homage to 'Mad Men'
- Will 'Dark Knight' dominate again this weekend?
- Spoiler: Last night's 'Runway'
- Amy Adams gets engaged; Kelsey Grammer almost dies
- Actors seeking SAG seats; Daddy Carlos Leon's princess
- Bale helps open Batman movie in Barcelona

By Ann Oldenburg with staff contributions

'Operation' gets a makeover, patient puts on pants

Scoop: We know Kanye West likes Connect Four and Demi Moore supposedly into dominoes, but what about Operation?

The big news today: the classic game is being reinvented. Cavity Sam (did you know that was the patient's name?) is putting on a pair of underwear. Old game, left; new game, right.

Not only that, but the new game features 13 new "Funatomy" parts, or ailments. Goodbye "Bread Basket," "Funny Bone" and "Butterflies in the Stomach." Hello "Toxic Gas," "Frog in the Throat" and "Burp Bubbles." And each new part has a sound associated with it. The sounds, along with new stretchy, shiny, slippery and squishy parts, aim to provide a more "multi-sensory experience," says Hasbro. The new game will be unveiled Aug. 5 as part of National Underwear Day.

